This story is about a little girl and a ghost that take place in another city. The setting is a young girl who has just arrived in a new city and a ghost who will disappear from the world in just one day. The little girl is just starting her life alone, the ghost has been wandering alone and both are very lonely. But the little girl is the only one who can see the ghost, so on this night, the ghost shows the girl the whole city and they dance under the tall buildings. When the dawn came, the little girl and the ghost clung to each other in the rising sunlight, and the ghost gradually became transparent and slowly disappeared. This story is actually based on my own feelings. It was my first time in London to start a new study life, so I wanted to find an anchor. I made up the story of the ghost to encourage myself, and I believe that I can meet people here who can give each other warmth.
